EXECUTIVE SYNTHESIS

A field interview conducted by researchers with Sushila Devi in a rural Indian village. The interview covers household demographics, financial status, and sanitation facilities. Sushila, a 50-year-old woman living with her daughter, reports severe financial constraints and a lack of income due to health issues preventing her from working. She relies on a meager pension. The interview also reveals that she uses a single-pit toilet provided by the Amrita NGO and has not received government funds for it. The interaction highlights language barriers between the researchers and the respondent, necessitating the use of hand gestures and simplified examples (like 'Gajar ka Halwa') to explain the Likert scale for survey responses.
